IRON. adj.
1. Made of iron.
In iron walls they deem'd me not secure. Shakefp. H. VI.
Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight Unto my cell. Shakefp. Romeo and Juliet.
Some are of an iron red, shining, and polite; others not polite, but as if powdered with iron dust. Woodward.
Poll-cats and weefels do a great deal of injury to warrens:
the way of taking them is in hutches, and iron traps. Mortim.
2. Resembling iron in colour.
A piece of stone of a dark iron grey colour, but in some parts of a ferruginous colour. Woodward on Fossils.
Some of them are of an iron red, and very bright. Woodes.
3. Harsh; severe; rigid; miserable; calamitous: as, the iron age, for an age of hardship and wickedness. These ideas may be found more or less in all the following examples.
Three vigorous virgins, waiting still behind,
Assist the throne of th' iron scepter'd king. Crafhaw.
O fad virgin, that thy power
Might bid the foul of Orpheus sing
Such notes as warbled to the string,
Drew iron tears from Pluto's cheek,
And made hell grant what love did seek. Milton.
In all my iron years of wars and dangers,
From blooming youth down to decaying age,
My fame ne'er knew a stain of dishonour. Rowe.
Jove crush the nations with an iron rod,
And ev'ry monarch be the scourge of God. Pope's Odyssey.
4. Indissoluble; unbroken.
Rash Elpenor, in an evil hour,
Dry'd an immeasurable bowl, and thought
To exhale his furest by irriguous sleep,
Imprudent: him death's iron sleep oppress. Phillips.
5. Hard; impenetrable.
I will converse with iron witted fools,
And unrespective boys: none are for me,
That look into me with confid'rate eyes. Shakefp. R. III.
TO IRON. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To smooth with an iron.
2. To shackle with irons.
IRONICAL. adj. [from ironique, Fr. from irony.] Expressing one thing and meaning another; speaking by contraries.
In this fallacy may be comprised all ironical mistakes, or expressions receiving inverted significations. Brown.
I take all your ironical civilities in a literal sense, and shall expect them to be literally performed. Swift.
IRONICALLY. adv. [from ironical.] By the use of irony.
Socrates was pronounced by the oracle of Delphos to be the wisest man of Greece, which he would turn from himself ironically, saying, there could be nothing in him to verify the oracle, except this, that he was not wise, and knew it; and others were not wise, and knew it not. Bacon.
The dean, ironically grave, Swift.
Still shunn'd the fool, and last'd the knave.
IRONMONGER. n. s. [from iron and monger.] A dealer in iron.
IRONWOOD. n. s. A kind of wood extremely hard, and so ponderous as to sink in water. It grows in America. Rob. Cruso.
IRONWORT. n. s. [from iron and wort.] It is a plant with a labiate flower, consisting of one leaf, whose upper lip or beard is divided into three parts: out of the flower-cup rises the pointal, attended, as it were, by four embryos; which afterward turn to so many oblong seeds, shut up in an hulk, which before was the flower-cup: to these marks must be added, the flowers growing in whorles at the wings of the leaves, which are cut like a crest, and differ from the other leaves of the plant. Mill.
IRONY. adj. [from iron.] Made of iron; partaking of iron.
The force they are under is real, and that of their fate but imaginary: it is not strange if the irony chains have more solidity than the contemplative. Hammond's Fundamentals.
Some springs of Hungary, highly impregnated with vitriolick salts, dissolve the body of one metal, suppose iron, put into the spring; and deposit, in lieu of the irony particles carried off, coppery particles. Woodward on Fossils.
IRONY. n. s. [from ironie, Fr. ironia.] A mode of speech in which the meaning is contrary to the words: as, Bolingbroke was a holy man.
So grave a body, upon so solemn an occasion, should not deal in irony, or explain their meaning by contraries. Swift.
IRRADIANCE. n. s. [from irradiance, French; irradiatio, Latin.]
IRRADIANCE. n. s. [from irradiance, French; irradiatio, Latin.]
1. Emission of rays or beams of light upon any object.
The principal affection is its translucency; the irradiance and sparkling, found in many gems, is not discoverable in this. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
2. Beams of light emitted.
Love not the heavenly spirits? Or do they mix Irradiance, virtual, or immediate touch? Milt. Par. Leg.
TO IRRADIATE. v. a. [from irradiatio, Latin.]
1. To adorn with light emitted upon it; to brighten.
When he thus perceives that these opacous bodies do not hinder the eye from judging light to have an equal plenary diffusion through the whole place it irradiates, he can have no difficulty to allow air, that is diaphanous, to be every where mingled with light. Digby on Bodies.

IRR

It is not a converting but a crowning grace; such an one as irradiates and puts a circle of glory about the head of him upon whom it descends. South.
2. To enlighten intellectually; to illumine; to illuminate.
Celestial light
Shine inward, and the mind through all her powers Irradiate; there plant eyes: all mist from thence Purge and disperse. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. iii.
3. To animate by heat or light.
Ethereal or solar heat must digest, influence, irradiate, and put those more simple parts of matter into motion. Hale.
4. To decorate with shining ornaments.
No weeping orphan saw his father's store
Our shrines irradiate, or imblaze the floor. Pope.
IRRADIATION. n. s. [from irradiatio, Fr. from irradiare.]
1. The act of emitting beams of light.
If light were a body it should drive away the air, which is likewise a body, wherever it is admitted; for within the whole sphere of the irradiation of it, there is no point but light is found. Digby on Bodies.
The generation of bodies is not effected by irradiation, or answerably unto the propagation of light; but herein a transmission is made materially from some parts, and ideally from every one. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
2. Illumination; intellectual light.
The means of derivation and immediate union of these intelligible objects to the understanding, are sometimes divine and supernatural, as by immediate irradiation or revelation.
Hale's Origin of Mankind.
IRRA'TIONAL. adj. [from irrationalis, Latin.]
1. Void of reason; void of understanding; without the discursive faculty.
Thus began
Outrage from lifeless things; but discord first,
Daughter of sin, among th' irrational
Death introduc'd. Milton's Paradise Lost.
He hath eat'n, and lives,
And knows, and speaks, and reasons and discerns;
Irrational till then. Milt. Paradise Lost, b. ix.
2. Absurd; contrary to reason.
Since the brain is only a part transmittent, and that humours oft are precipitated to the lungs before they arrive to the brain, no kind of benefit can be effected from so irrational an application. Harvey on Conjunction.
I shall quietly submit, not wishing so irrational a thing as that every body should be deceived. Pope.
IRRA'TIONALITY. n. s. [from irrational.] Want of reason.
IRRA'TIONALLY. adv. [from irrational.] Without reason;
absurdly.
IRRECLAIMABLE. adj. [in and reclaimable.] Not to be reclaimed; not to be changed to the better.
As for obstinate, irreclaimable, professed enemies, we must expect their calamities will continue. Addison's Freethinker.
IRRECONCILABLE. adj. [from irreconcilable, Fr. in and reconcilable.]
1. Not to be reconciled; not to be appeased.
Wage eternal war,
Irreconcilable to our grand foe. Milton.
A weak unequal faction may animate a government; but when it grows equal in strength, and irreconcilable by animosity, it cannot end without some crisis. Temple.
There are no factions, though irreconcilable to one another, that are not united in their affection to you. Dryden.
2. Not to be made consistent. It has with or to.
As she was strictly virtuous herself, so she always put the best construction upon the words and actions of her neighbours, except where they were irreconcilable to the rules of honesty and decency. Arbutnot's Hist. of John Bull.
Since the sense I oppose is attended with such gross irreconcilable absurdities, I presume I need not offer any thing further in support of the one, or in disproof of the other. Rogers.
This essential power of gravitation or attraction is irreconcilable with the atheist's own doctrine of a chaos. Beattie.
All that can be transmitted from the stars is wholly unac-countable, and irreconcilable to any system of science. Beattie.
IRRECONCILABLENESS. n. s. [from irreconcilable.] Impossibility to be reconciled.
IRRECONCILABLY. adv. [from irreconcilable.] In a manner not admitting reconciliation.
IRRECONCILED. adj. [in and reconciled.] Not atoned.
A servant dies in many irreconciled iniquities. Shakefp. H. V.
IRRECOVERABLE. adj. [in and recoverable.]
1. Not to be regained; not to be restored or repaired.
Time, in a natural sense, is irrecoverable: the moment just fled by us, it is impossible to recall. Rogers.
2. Not to be remedied.
The irrecoverable loss of so many livings of principal value.
It concerns every man, that would not trifle away his soul, and fool himself into irrecoverable misery, with the greatest seriousness to enquire. Tillotson's Sermons.
IRRECOVERABLY.

IRR

IRRECOVERABLY. adv. [from irrecoverable.] Beyond recovery; past repair.
O dark, dark, dark amid' the blaze of noon;
Irrecoverably dark, total eclipse,
Without all hope of day. Milton's Agonistes.
The credit of the Exchequer is irrecoverably lost by the last breach with the bankers. Temple.
IRREDUCIBLE. adj. [in and reducible.] Not to be brought or reduced.
These observations seem to argue the corpuscles of air to be irreducible into water. Boyle.
IRREFRAGABILITY. n. s. [from irrefragabile.] Strength of argument not to be refuted.
IRREFRAGABLE. adj. [from irrefragabilis, school Latin; irrefragabile, Fr.] Not to be confuted; superior to argumental opposition.
Strong and irrefragable the evidences of Christianity must be: they who refuted them would resist every thing. Atterbury.
The danger of introducing unexperienced men was urged as an irrefragable reason for working by flow degrees. Swift.
IRREFRAGABLY. adv. [from irrefragabile.] With force above confutation.
That they denied a future state is evident from St. Paul's reasonings, which are of no force but only on that supposition, as Origen largely and irrefragably proves. Atterbury.
IRREFUTABLE. adj. [from irrefutabilis, Latin.] Not to be overthrown by argument.
IRREGULAR. adj. [from irregularis, Latin.]
1. Deviating from rule, custom, or nature.
The am'rous youth
Obtain'd of Venus his desire,
How'er irregular his fire.
2. Immethodical; not confined to any certain rule or order.
This motion seems excentric and irregular, yet not well to be resisted or quieted. King Charles.
Regular
Then most, when most irregular they seem. Milton.
The numbers of pindarics are wild and irregular, and sometimes seem harsh and uncouth. Cowley.
3. Not being according to the laws of virtue. A soft word for virtuous.
IRREGULARITY. n. s. [from irregularitas, Fr. from irregular.]
1. Deviation from rule.
2. Neglect of method and order.
This irregularity of its unruly and tumultuous motion might afford a beginning unto the common opinion. Brown.
As these vast heaps of mountains are thrown together with so much irregularity and confusion, they form a great variety of hollow bottoms. Addison on Italy.
3. Inordinate practice.
Religion is somewhat less in danger of corruption, while the sinner acknowledges the obligations of his duty, and is ashamed of his irregularities. Rogers's Sermons.
IRREGULARLY. adv. [from irregular.] Without observation of rule or method.
Phaeton,
By the wild courses of his fancy drawn,
From East to West irregularly hurl'd,
First set on fire himself, and then the world. Dryden jun.
Your's is a foul irregularly great,
Which wanting temper, yet abounds with heat. Dryden.
It may give some light to those whose concern for their little ones makes them so irregularly bold as to consult their own reason, in the education of their children, rather than to rely upon old custom. Locke.
TO IRREGULATE. v. a. [from in and regula, Latin.] To make irregular; to disorder.
Its fluctuations are but motions subservient, which winds, shelves, and every interjacency irregulates. Brown's Vulg. Err.
IRRELATIVE. adj. [in and relativity, Latin.] Having no reference to any thing; single; unconnected.
Separated by the voice of God, things in their species came out in uncommunicated varieties, and irrelative femininities.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.
IRRELIGION. n. s. [from irreligio, Fr. in and religion.] Contempt of religion; impiety.
The weapons with which I combat irreligion are already consecrated. Dryden.
We behold every instance of prophaneness and irreligion, not only committed, but defended and gloried in. Rogers.
IRRELIGIOUS. adj. [from irreligiatus, Fr. in and religious.]
1. Contemning religion; impious.
The ill of an irreligious Moor. Shakefp. Tit. Andron.
Whoever sees these irreligious men,
With burthen of a sickness weak and faint,
But hears them talking of religion then,
And vowing of their souls to ev'ry saint,
Shame and reproach is generally the portion of the impious and irreligious. South's Sermons.
2. Contrary to religion.
Wherein that Scripture standeth not the church of God in any stead, or serveth nothing at all to direct, but may be let pals as needfuls to be consulted with, we judge it profane, impious, and irreligious to think. H. cher.

IRR

Pals'd on, and took th' irremediable way. Dryden.
IRREMEDIAL. adj. [from irremediabilis, Fr. in and remediable.]
Admitting no cure; not to be remedied.
They content themselves with that which was the irremediable error of former times, or the necessity of the present hath cast upon them. Hooker.
A steady hand, in governing of military affairs, is more requisite than in times of peace, because an error committed in war may prove irremediable. Bacon.
Whatever he consults you about, unless it lead to some fatal and irremediable mischief, be sure you advise only as a friend. Locke.
IRREMEDIABLY. adv. [from irremediabilis.] Without cure.
It happens to us irremediably and inevitably, that we may perceive these accidents are not the fruits of our labour, but gifts of God. Taylor's Worthy Communicant.
IRREMISSE. adj. [in and remitte, Lat. irremissibilis, French.]
